CROSS-BREEDING HENS AND BIRDS

Washington, June 7.—Fowl fanciers and experts in the bureau of animal industry are seeking some method of cross-breeding whereby the unattractive but useful hen can sprout plumage as variegated as Joseph's coat of many colors. The activity of the experts is inspired by the fact that an ever-increasing number of states are passing stringent laws against the despoiling of birds for their plumage while several federal laws prohibiting the traffic in such plumage already are in effect.

The bird division of the National Museum also has the matter under consideration, but it is inclined to believe that the evolution of the common hen along the lines desired is scarcely practical.

"It might be accomplished," said one of the scientists, facetiously, "by hatching the eggs in a dye house. It might also be accomplished by feeding the chickadees ochre, Prussian blue and other var-colored powders instead of corn or other grain. One, you know, can never tell what might happen in such a truly scientific experiment."
